

AWFUL SCENES ARE EXPECTED

From One End of the Ottoman Empire to the Other, Uprisings May Occur.

A CRITICAL PERIOD

The Sultan Will Have His Hands Full, Within a Few Days, at Most.

(Special By Scripps-Mellae.)

Constantinople, Sept. 9.—It is stated that two thousand insurgents are now surrounded by Turkish troops who are said to be acting under special orders direct from the sultan.

Other Fighting. It now appears as if the Turks would by force of money and men completely exterminate the insurgents. Orders are said to have been sent out that no insurgent is to be allowed to escape if possible. Fighting now going on the shores of Lake Matova, near Salonika.

Fear Is Felt. Much fear is felt by Turkish residents in the disturbed districts that the trouble will spread to the capital and the residents of Constantinople are by constant dread of some dire thing happening to them. The ports still deny the truth of the outrages said to have been enacted at Monastir.

Reports True. It is, however, an established fact that thirty thousand Bulgarians lost their lives at Monastir. Private information even makes the figure much larger.

Removes Veil. The ports today announced that he had removed the veil of Beirut and had ordered the veil of Damascus to proceed at once to Beirut to take charge of affairs. He will have two battalions of troops. The Christians of the city are in a panic. It is said many have sought shelter in the American consulate. France will send warships to guard after her interests.

HANSON'S BIG BARN BURNS TO GROUND

Town of La Prairie Farmer Loses Structure and Contents by Lightning.

With a terrific crash, a lightning bolt struck the big hay stack barn of Ole Hanson, town of La Prairie, five miles east of this city, about ten o'clock this morning, together with its contents, the entire hay crop, two thousand bushels of barley, numerous farming implements and two head of stock.

Men All Away. Not a man was about the place at the time the conflagration started. Mr. Hanson being in the city making some purchases having left the farm early in the morning. When the fire was discovered one of the ladies went to the Barless farm and telephoned to Dave Brown's feed store, in the hopes of getting track of Mr. Hanson.

Ole Hanson in Town. That gentleman was in a store when he was informed that his barn and most of the summer's work was going up in smoke. He left immediately for his home.

Nearly All Stock Saved. Fortunately most of the stock and all of the horses were either in the pasture or at work at the time of the lightning stroke so that the loss of live stock only amounted to two head. Two calves having been left in the barn. Numerous farming implements and wagons were in the barn and much was destroyed.

Insurance Not Known. The structure was comparatively new as it had only been standing nine years. The barn was built to take the place of an old one that was also destroyed by fire about ten years ago. The amount of insurance on the barn or its contents could not be learned.

IS RESCUED BY MEANS OF KITE

Steeplejack Brought From Perilous Position by Boy's Toy.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 9.—F. Devillo, steeplejack of Belmont, Allegheny county, climbed the steeple of the Episcopal church in Geneva to examine the damage done by lightning. When he was near the top of the steeple his rope caught so that he could not move up or down, and it was necessary to get another rope to him. The nearest place to Sanders that could be reached was sixty feet below where he was dangling. Ezekiel Willis, a boy, got out his kite and flew it so that Sanders could grasp the string. These pieces of cord of gradually increasing size were attached to the kite string until Sanders got a rope and came down.

Receptor William A. Clark of Menasha arrived yesterday from Europe on the steamer Deutschland.

NEW ADDITION SOON FINISHED

Dye House at the Porch Shade Factory Will Be Ready for Winter Work.

The new addition to the porch shade factory will soon begin to take definite shape. The basement to the new structure is now nearly finished and the contractors think that by next week the stone and mason work will be well under way. The addition will be used as the dye house and all the paints and coloring material used in the construction of the shades will be kept in the building. The idea being to remove this department from the main factory. The location of this branch will be east of the main structure and south of the warehouse. Its dimensions are 20 feet by 70 feet, to be one story in height and of brick. The contractor states that the building is to be finished in October.

ALLOW PASSENGER TO PAWN WATCH

Boy with a Careless Father, Helped Out at Northwestern Depot This Morning.

Railroad conductors are not the hard-hearted individuals they are generally supposed to be. An illustration to the point was brought out this morning in an incident that occurred at the North-Western depot. An eighteen-year-old boy with a half fare ticket from St. Paul to Rockford was the leading character in the little comedy. The ticket had been purchased by his good father in St. Paul, who, in addition thereto had given him $5 for spending money. The train had barely got under way from St. Paul before the half-fare ticket and the boy were subjected to the closest scrutiny, with the result that the $5 went to transform the half-fare ticket to Rockford into a full-fare ticket to Janesville. The boy was in a terrible state of mind when he reached this city. But the good conductor told him that something would be done and asked him if he had anything of value on his person. The boy's face brightened as he drew out a silver watch of trifling value. The official took the watch and after a conference with some of the local officials, placed it with the ticket agent, subject to redemption as soon as relatives in Rockford forwarded the money for the fare from Janesville.

RAILWAY TO DEVELOP CENTRAL INDIANA FIELD

Line to Run From Indianapolis South via Bloomington to Sullivan a Distance of 110 Miles.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—The Indianapolis Southern Railway company has been organized to construct a line from Indianapolis south via Bloomington to Sullivan, on the Evansville & Terre Haute railroad, a distance of 110 miles, with branches aggregating forty miles in length. The road will have no grade exceeding 1 per cent and no curves of over 60 degrees. It will reach the center of Indianapolis from the south, via Pogue's run, with only one grade crossing. The road will open up a territory of undeveloped coal, iron ore, and stone lands in Monroe, Green and Sullivan counties.

The stone is the well-known Indiana limestone and the new road, it is said, has already assurances of tonnage from shippers of stone and coal sufficient to meet the interest on the bonds. The capitalization of the company is $6,000,000 in common stock and $5,000,000 of first mortgage 5 per cent fifty-year bonds. The funds necessary to complete the entire line have been provided. Interests identified with the project have acquired about 22,000 acres of coal and iron ore lands on the line of the road.

TURKEY ADMITS AWFUL SCENE IN BULGARIA SOON TO THE SHOOTING

NOW SAYS CONSUL MEGELSEN WAS SHOT AT. THEY WOULD ANNIHILATE ALL THE INSURGENT BANDS.

WANTS THE SHIPS MOVED IT WAS BEGUN AT MONISTER

London Embassy Says Their Presence Rouses the People to Trouble.

(Special By Scripps-Mellae.) Washington, Sept. 9.—The navy department this morning received word from Cotton to the effect that there had been no disturbances since Monday night and that the situation was apparently much improved and the public feeling growing quieter.

To Protect Americans. Admiral Cotton's message adds that he is prepared to land a force of marines for the protection of American lives and property at the first intimation that such a step is necessary. An officer and signal man from the American fleet are now in consultation with Consul Haywood at Beirut, a full investigation is being made into conditions in the city by Lieutenant Charles L. Hussey, Admiral Cotton's flag lieutenant, and the future course of the United States officials will depend largely on the report he may make.

From advices thus far received it appears that the outbreak followed the assassination of several Christian residents of the city. Rioting began in the public square, and when the troops were called out to suppress it the butchery began.

Doubt the Porte. Minister Leishman says that the Porte asserts that the Beirut riots have been suppressed and that no further trouble is feared. Officials of the state department are not altogether prepared to accept the Porte's assurance as wholly reliable and additional instructions have been cabled to the minister looking to the protection of American interests throughout the Ottoman empire.

Admiral Cotton's cablegram to the navy department is as follows: "Violence and bloodshed between Mohammedans and native Christians occurred at Beirut Sunday. Six Greek Christians, two Mohammedans and one Turkish soldier killed; three Greek Christians, three Mohammedans and three Turkish soldiers wounded seriously. Other murders reported."

Verify Statement. "Flag Lieutenant and United States consul were present Sunday and Monday in the disturbed quarter and verify details of statement. Turkish government willingly afforded facility for their investigation and guard; promise 1,000 more Turkish soldiers. Turkish soldiers present sufficient. If properly disposed of, to handle situation at Beirut. Well patrolled and all quiet Sunday night and Monday."

"Turkish governor promises to do all in his power to restore authority. Many houses closed and business suspended. I have prepared to land force for protection of property of American citizens if situation demands. Will act with caution."

The last portion of Admiral Cotton's cablegram is unintelligible and the cipher experts at the navy department worked hard to translate it.

Blames Christians. A cablegram from the Turkish foreign office to Chetib Bey, the Turkish minister, here, gives the following version of the trouble at Beirut Sunday reported by Admiral Cotton in his dispatch to the navy department: "Some Christians of the city of Beirut attacked four Mohammedans and during the melee which followed several persons were killed and injured. Two of the wounded and one of the dead are soldiers."

"The minister received a dispatch from Constantinople characterizing as 'absolutely false' the published reports that there was no security in Constantinople and that Muslims and the imperial troops were responsible for massacres and the setting fire to houses in Roumolia."

AWFUL SCENE IN BULGARIA SOON TO THE SHOOTING

THEY WOULD ANNIHILATE ALL THE INSURGENT BANDS.

Drive the Patriots Into a Corner, and Then Kill Them Off.

(Special By Scripps-Mellae.) Philadelphia, Eastern Roumanian, Sept. 9.—Advices from the interior show that the Bulgarians have been treating the Mussulman inhabitants with such cruelty that many large families have decided to leave the country and seek security in Constantinople.

Complete Annihilation. It has been learned here that the plan of the Turks is to make a complete drive of the whole country and force the insurgents into a small space when the troops will be turned loose upon them and they will be completely wiped out. The first part of the plan has been commenced at Monister and the second will soon be begun.

LONG HARD RUN BY PATROL WAGON

Called to William Heise's Home South of Institute for Blind.

A long run over muddy roads to find only, at the end, that the fire had been put out, was the result of a still alarm sent in from the Institute for the Blind yesterday afternoon. Chief Klein was thankful that the party who telephoned did not send in a general alarm from the box at the state building, and needlessly call out the entire department. It was a hard pull for the horses, with the heavy patrol wagon but they covered the distance with good speed. Chief Klein made the trip in his buggy and was followed closely by the patrol. The fire which was in Wm. Heise's house, occupied by Ed. Smith, was of unknown origin and found among the household furniture but was confined to few pieces, although the woodwork was damaged to the extent of $75. The furniture loss will come up to $1000. The fire was extinguished by neighbors before the arrival of the white wagon. The property of Wm. Heise is directly south of the Institute.

GRANDSTAND COLLAPSES INJURING TWENTY-FIVE

Many Sustain Broken Legs During Sham Battle by Regular Troops at Fort Leavenworth.

Leavenworth, Kas., Sept. 9.—A grand stand erected on a knoll on the Fort Leavenworth reservation gave way during a sham battle by regular troops, injuring twenty-five persons. None were killed. Many of those injured received broken legs. Fully 1,500 persons crowded onto the stand. There was a heavy artillery duel with siege guns. Three battalions of infantry were using black powder. Some one announced that the cavalry were emerging from the ravine to charge. People on the grand stand jumped up to see them through the smoke.

The entire stand went down with a crash. The utmost confusion followed, accompanied by shrieks of victims. It was found that many were pinned down under the boards. Hundreds who were walking on the ground rushed to the grand stand looking for relatives. The confusion was indescribable until the regular soldiers formed a line and kept all back not injured or caring for those injured.

The battle, which was at its height on the opposite side of the road, was called off at once, and the soldiers, acting under direction of their officers, began taking care of the injured. Ambulances were used to convey people to the city hospitals and within a hour after the accident the injured had all been removed.

SWITCH ENGINES FLY SOUTHWARD

Migration from the North, Where Rush Season Is Over, Commences on Northwestern.

Switch engines on the North-Western road are flying southward with the birds these days. The heavy freight traffic in northern Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan is about over for the year and additional locomotives will not be required again until spring. A string of engines from the northern division, consisting of numbers 816, 1037, 1040 and 909, bound for Chicago, passed through Janesville at six o'clock last night. No. 384 also left yesterday and 911 today. Some of these engines will spend the winter in the Chicago shops. Others will be sent out on other divisions where reinforcements are needed. Of the crews, the older are given the preference for positions during the dull season.

STRIKE DID NOT DELAY BUSINESS

Two Fleet Footed Mercuries of the Western Union Failed to Secure Their Demands.

There was a strike at the Western Union office yesterday morning but it did not delay the transmission of the messages more than a half hour. It was just about eleven when the two youngsters who have been carrying messages all summer decided that the time was opportune for them to demand more pay. The wires were hot from Chicago with press dispatches and valuable telegrams that must be delivered at once. Perhaps the youthful mercuries had read of the Chicago strike; perhaps they were expecting a sympathetic walk out of all other unions in the city if their demands were not granted. Anyway they approached Manager Carpenter and told him they wanted two dollars a month more pay than they were getting at present. The answer was a direct refusal of the demand and then the two followers of the walking delegate said they were going to quit. It took but a few minutes to secure two telegraph students to take their places and the work of the great Western Union corporation was not seriously delayed by the strike of the two Janesville messengers. In fact it is doubtful if any one knew the difference for the messages kept on coming with perhaps a little more promptness and regularity than previously.

ART LEAGUE WILL MEET ON FRIDAY

First Session of the Janesville Art League Will Be Held at Mrs. William Ashcraft's.

On Friday afternoon next the Janesville Art league will hold the first meeting of the year at the home of Mrs. William Ashcraft, 161 North Jackson street. As this is the meeting at which the election of the officers for the coming year is to be held and the reports of the secretary and treasurer read it is hoped all who are members of the league will attend. The meeting will be held at three o'clock. The secretaries of the history and art divisions will also make reports of their work. It is now planned to have a series of six lectures by Professor Wright of Beloit college as a part of the work for the coming winter. Professor Wright will take up the study of Greek art in ancient mythology at the point where he left off last year.

At the trial Lowe set up the plea of insanity, on which the jury disagreed. English-speaking Catholic congregation at Marinette, has announced his intention rigidly to prohibit courting among the children of his parish and also dancing. He announced from his pulpit Sunday that any boy or girl keeping company or attending dances during the school year would be expelled. There are 500 children in the parish and the new order has created a sensation.

TURKS BUTCHER THE CHRISTIANS

Admiral Cotton Reports Beirut To Be a Scene of Violence and Bloodshed.

MARINES READY

Naval Official Is Prepared to Protect American Citizens When Leishman Thinks Necessary.

(Special By Scripps-Mellae.) London, Sept. 9.—The Turkish embassy here has issued a statement to the effect that the ports hopes that the American warships at Beirut will depart speedily as their presence only tends to incite the inhabitants to rebellion and trouble. No reason exists they claim for such an array of warships as now lies off Beirut.

Admit Shooting. The report says: "An American consul was shot at but uninjured and it has not yet been discovered that it was done for any political reason. The recent rioting at Beirut." This is the first time that the Turkish government had admitted that Consul Megelsen was shot at all though much evidence had been brought to prove the claims.

CROWS HOLD A SPIRITED MEET

Thirty Two Birds Listen to an Interesting Talk from Their Leader.

Thirty-two crows gathered together on a lawn in the Fifth ward while a thirty-third crow apparently addressed them was the odd sight observed on afternoon this week. That such a number should be seen together on a small lawn with houses and buildings on nearly all sides and within a short distance of the crowded streets was thought remarkable by those who witnessed the strange sight. Whether the black coated birds of ill omen were discussing the garbage question or simply inspecting the premises is not known but there appears to be some attractions for feathered folk at this place for only the day before eleven robins were counted hopping around on the same plot of ground. The crows remained bunched together on the grass for some time and must have conversed in a way known to each other for they all at the same time made peculiar noises that were markedly different from the well known "caw caw."

Goten Talks.

Every one in the block called him "the neighborhood dog" and all who lived nearby liked the little black fellow who was the friend of all the small boys and girls in the ward. He was an intelligent little animal never known to bite or bark, except when there was real occasion for it. He was a worthy protector of his mistress, Mrs. Rhoda J. Bennett, of Cherry street. "Dick" could always pick out a tramp from the grocer's boy and strangers who came to the house and no vagrant was ever allowed to stay long on the premises. When the news of his death became known to his many friends, many expressions of regret were heard and when flowers were put on the dog's grave it only showed that oftentimes the dog is a good friend to man.

PRETTY SIGHTS SEEN ON RIVER

SCENERY CHARMING FOR SOME DISTANCE UP.

IT IS WELL WORTH THE TRIP

Parts of the Shore Resemble the Historic Hudson River of the East.

For those who enjoy hours spent in recreation on the water, Rock river, at this time of the year has attractions unequalled. After the first mile above the city is past, en route upstream, the banks on both sides present every variety of landscape, from miniature tree and brush covered mountains to level fields stretching away from the water's edge covered with the tasseled corn or bare after the devastation of the harvest; or from wild cliffs and gorges to groves of apple trees, both natural and artificial, all of which offer many delights to the lover of nature.

First Impression. First impression of the river above the outskirts of the city show low lands and marshes on the right while the railway along the other bank takes something from the picturesqueness of the view during the day but at night when the electric lighted trains rush by to the northward, the engines showering sparks high into the air, while the red glow from the furnace, as the door is opened and the fire fed, shows far back along the track and the headlight stretching forward into the inky blackness, lights up the ghostly telegraph poles that seem to stand like sentinels along the track, guarding the mass of humanity that is being whirled through the darkness.

Near Crystal Springs. One of the prettiest spots along the stream, in the opinion of many who know it well, is in the vicinity of the two bends above and below Crystal Springs park. Here the scenery becomes more wild and the view from the deck of the puffing river steamer as the craft follows the channel around the turn at this point, must be seen to be appreciated. The panorama of the winding strip of water as it can be seen from the top of the hill at this point, reminds one almost of the historic Hudson, on a small scale, and that perhaps descendants of the "little men of the mountains," that Rip Van Winkle met, might have once been found among these hills too.

Not a part of the river becomes monotonous, though one continues as far as navigation permits, the same yet ever varying landscape comes to view, becoming if anything, more beautiful farther from the city.

Sunny Afternoons. On bright sunny afternoons at this time of the year the river is at its best, for now the foliage is beginning to turn and the sunlight glancing from the ripples strikes the masses of leaves along the bank turning the delicate tints into masses of crimson and gold. Back among the tree covered hills, as the shadows of the late day begin to lengthen, the clusters of green yellow and brown amongst the darker background of the hillsides form pictures that are masterpieces.

THIRD REGIMENT WILL MEET SOON

Arrangements Are Being Made for This Historic Band of Men To Hold Reunion.

On Thursday and Friday of next week the gallant old Third Wisconsin regiment will hold their annual reunion in Janesville. It will be a gathering worthy of note and Col. E. O. Kimberly, president of the association, is doing all in his power to make it as successful as those of the past have been. This is the 13th annual reunion of the regiment and out of a total enlistment of 1919 men during the time of enlistment but 125 are now alive.

Gen. Ruger's Regiment. The Third Wisconsin was organized in 1861, and served four years until discharged in 1865. It was Col. Thomas H. Ruger's regiment originally but Col. Ruger soon left it and is now a retired Major Gen. U. S. A., making his home at Stamford, Conn. General Ruger's home was in Janesville when the war broke out and relatives of his still live here. The Second Major General the regiment turned out was the late Major General, C. S. Hamilton, of Milwaukee, his grand daughter, Mrs. Edward Pratt lives in this city.

General Bryant's Corp. The only Brigadier General the regiment produced was the late Gen. Bryant of Madison, who recently died very suddenly in Canada. The regiment was rendezvoused at Fond du Lac. It was composed of companies from Green, Dane and Lafayette counties with other scattering commands. In all there were 1909 men enlisted during the war and served during the four years either being discharged or killed in engagements during that period. Of this number 1800 have gone to their last reward and awaiting the trumpet of Gabriel to wake them to the last roll call. Each year about 35 of these grizzled veterans meet to discuss their war days, plan for the future and pay their respects to the comrades departed during the past year. Three members of the regiment live in the city, Colonel E. O. Kimberly, J. F. Carlo and B. M. Bucklin. Col. Kimberly has sent out invitations to all the 125 survivors who remain and hopes at least 35 will respond in person.

Camp Fire. In his invitation Col. Kimberly states that the headquarters of the visitors will be at the G. A. R. hall and that special rates have been so cured at the Park hotel for accommodations. On Friday evening, a camp fire will be held in the city hall.

Famous Regiment. The Third Wisconsin Regiment has been noted for its capture of the Maryland legislature in 1861 at almost the outbreak of the war.

POLL TAX SEEMS A DEAD LETTER

Street Commissioner Has the List—Attempt Was Made Years Ago.

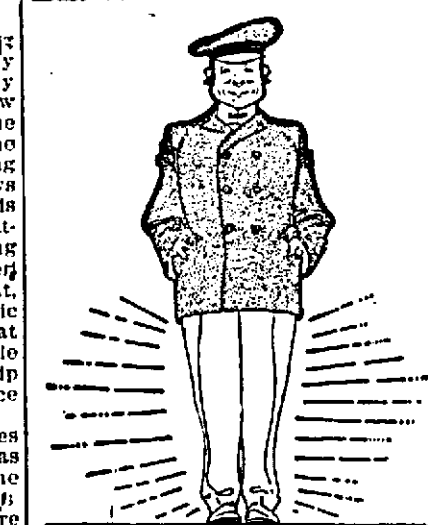

City Clerk A. E. Badger has made out a list of those who are liable for the poll tax of $1.00 which the municipal league wants levied, and turned over to the street commissioner for collection. No attempt to collect the tax has been made since John Thoroughgood was mayor, that attempt was abandoned after the first effort. The street commissioner strove to collect from the then mayor as a starter and was so roundly abused that he gave up the work in disgust. There is little likelihood that any effort to collect will be made this year. Along with the dog tax the poll tax seems destined to remain a dead letter.

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, Sept. 9, 1863.—We had a call from S. D. Carpenter, of the Madison Patriot, this morning. He was in search of what he could not find at home—a loyal locality—and he found it in our sanction.

Headquarters 5th Regiment Wis. Vol., Camp Sherman, Bear Creek, Mississippi, August 31st, 1863.—Editors Gazette: We are still located near the Black river, and are actually, for once in a year, taking a good rest. Never have the duties been so light in any camp as this—very little guard duty to perform, and the men, after many long months of marching and fatigue duty, to say nothing of the fighting, are at rest, and talking of bygone days, and scenes of the past three months that they have witnessed, and of the prospects of the future, and copperheads in particular. They are not forgotten in the army. We don't mean all democrats when we say copperheads—we mean traitors; men who are continually denouncing the administration; men who are forever harping on the constitutionality of every act and order that is issued; men who never denounce Jeff Davis and the hounds around him; never speak of the constitutionality of the conscription act as enforced by Davis; never see anything wrong at Richmond, and forever seeing things wrong at Washington. Such men we call ferret kind of men, if I understand them. I understand John A. Logan, Gen. McArthur, and men of their principles, to be democrats. Such men we are willing to trust; be they what they may in politics; and I believe there are thousands of such men left yet. Give us loyal men, give us good union men—men who will stand by Abraham Lincoln and the administration—we care not whether they be democrats or republicans. Col. Robbins has left the service and gone home. He returned from the north but a few days ago, and by all appearances he has been in bad company. He attended the democratic convention at Madison and didn't hear Judge Orton or any one in the convention say anything but what he thought was all right. We fully endorse the union ticket of Wisconsin with James T. Lewis at the head. Fisher and Shampner, of Company G, died since I wrote you last. Mrs. Britton and Mrs. Sargent are here in camp. All quiet at present, but hostilities may commence at any moment. No fears are entertained as to the result, of course.

W. B. BRITTON.

ART OF OTHER DAYS

SOME IMMORTAL WORKS OF THE ITALIAN MASTERS.

Doors of the Cathedral at Florence. Recently Unveiled, Are Much Admired—Marvelous Beauty of Ghiberti's Carvings.

(Special Correspondence.)

The adornment of church doors is an art of ancient date that still flourishes in Italy. The Church of Santa Sabina, on the Aventine at Rome, has a door of cedar wood carved with scriptural scenes, and the work dates from the fifth century. A few days ago, at an interval of fifteen centuries, the central door of the Florentine cathedral was unveiled in the presence of King Victor Emmanuel III., and its bas-reliefs in gilded bronze show that the art of adorning doors has not yet died out of Italian art.

As an engraved frontispiece to a book giving hints of the beauty that was within, the door or door frame of an ancient church was made a work of art. In that old carved cedar door of Santa Sabina on the Aventine Hill at Rome—a site which is notable for its memories, dating back to the foundation of the city—we get illuminating glimpses of the art of the period. That, apart from the evidence it furnishes to the religious thought of the time, is the special value of the designs with which it is adorned.

The art of the catacombs is ended; sculpture following the decline of painting is rapidly going down; architecture, the last of the fine arts to suffer decadence, is still vigorous. At this moment, when the arts are forsaking Rome to seek a home in Ravenna, where they will find a new development, but not the most esthetic, the carved door of Santa Sabina stands, a landmark between the two styles, and a fruitful theme for the art critics and students of today.

It was in 1180 that Bonanno of Pisa made the gates of the duomo in his native city; 200 years later, save two—that is, in 1378, the greatest maker of bronze doors that the world has yet beheld was born at Florence, Lorenzo Ghiberti.

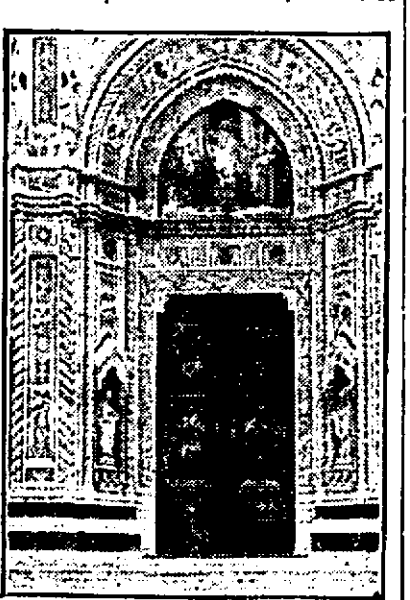

Brunelleschi, born a year before Ghiberti, who will come into competition with him later, is distinguished in the history of art for the construction of the grandiose cupola on the Cathedral of Florence, the prototype of Michael Angelo's cupola of St. Peter's in Rome. Ponnatello, the marvelous sculptor, whose influence has been as new wine among the artists of his time, was eight years younger than Ghiberti.

The contest of competing artists for the commission offered by the signoria for the two bronze doors of the baptistry of San Giovanni is well known. Every visitor to the National Museum of the Bargello in Florence may compare the specimens of workmanship sent in by the two prominent rivals, Brunelleschi and Ghiberti.

The subject chosen was the Sacrifice of Isaac. "This story," as Vasari has it, "comprising landscape with human figures, nude and clothed, as well as those of animals; the foremost of these figures was to be in full relief, the second in half-relief, and the third in low-relief." The award was given to Ghiberti.

The outcome of the success gained is to be seen in the first gate which Ghiberti wrought, receiving the commission for it on Nov. 23, 1403, and the contract obliging him to begin the work on the 1st of December following, and continue it without intermission—feast days excepted—until its completion. This door, divided in the center, consists of twenty-eight bas-reliefs, arranged in chronological order, each possessing a special frame, adorned with a band of ivy leaves, and having at each angle the head of a prophet or a sibyl. Twenty of the subjects are taken from the New Testament; the others represent the evangelists and the doctors of the church.

One of the most striking of these is the "Annunciation," which the late Charles Perkins of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and correspondent of Door of Florentine Cathedral, the Institute of France, describes as being equal to the best representation of this work, whether painted or modeled, that has been made in Italy at any period. Its supreme qualities are simplicity and gracefulness, as well as a strict interpretation of the text of the gospel.

The "Baptism of Christ" begins to show the tendency of Ghiberti to the pictorial rather than the sculptural style of expression. The perspective of the scene is felt, and the movement of the arm of the Baptist is quite in

The hale, the hearty, the strong can afford to toss this paper to one side impatiently when they read the following but any sufferer in Janesville who has suffered hours of torture caused by kidney complaint will stand in his own light if he does not follow the valuable advice offered here:

Mr. W. S. Sapp of 412 Euclid avenue, proprietor of the largest rock quarry business in Deloit says: "I had trouble with my kidneys for many years. It consisted mainly of a lame and aching back and there were occasions when I had such severe attacks that I could not get out of the house for two or three weeks at a time. I was then practically helpless for it was painful to move. At other times it assumed a milder form being a dull aching across my kidneys, used medicines of different kinds but I never found anything that gave the satisfaction Doan's Kidney Pills gave. This remedy is worthy of a high recommendation and it is a pleasure for me to endorse it as doing all that is claimed for it."

Just such emphatic endorsements can be had right here in Janesville. Drop into the People's Drug Co.'s store and ask what their customers report.

INSPECT ONLY ON COMPLAINTS

BARBERS' COMMISSION NOT TO TOUR STATE.

ARE FIFTEEN HUNDRED SHOPS.

And It Would Take Three Men a Year
To Make Rounds, Says
Whittaker.

"A wrong impression has gone abroad concerning the plans and scope of the work of the state barbers' commission," said M. H. Whittaker today. "We do not intend to personally inspect all the shops of the state. There are 1,500 or more of them and it would be a physical impossibility for three of us to get to all of them unless we worked every day in the year."

Fund About $3,300
"The fund at our disposal will amount to about $3,300. I have already received about 2,900 requests for licenses and the other members of the board also have a number of them. All the barbers now engaged in the vocation will be registered and licensed on receipt of one dollar. This fee will be paid each year."

Act on Complaints Only
"Those engaging in the profession hereafter will have to undergo an examination before the commission. We cannot hope to revolutionize things all at once but the new system will work out to the lasting benefit of the public as years go on. For the present our inspection will be confined to localities from which complaints cover contiguous districts. The small towns in the northern part of the state will probably demand our early attention as careless and unskilled barbers are known to abound in those localities."

The New Rules
Mr. Whittaker does not approve of the plan to compel barbers to wash their hands in soap and hot water after each "patient" has been treated. Such procedure he believes would be unnecessary and absurd as it would not prevent the transmission of disease. A proper germicide in the preparations used on the face after shaving and the washing of the hands in an antiseptic solution after working on a customer who was suffering from any form of skin disease would be a much more sensible requirement.

Precautionary Measures
Nor does he believe that it is practicable to require barbers to wash and dry their clippers. First class barbers never use a towel more than once without washing, but then, few of the rules will affect the first class ones anyway. Axel Douhan is expected here this week and a final revision and formulation of the new rules will be made at that time. Among other things they will probably provide that nothing in stick form shall be used to stop the flow of blood, but that the astringent shall be in powdered form. No towel shall be used for more than one person without being washed. Brushes shall not be used. Mugs and shaving brushes, combs, razors, scissors and clippers shall be washed after each use. No barber, unless he be a licensed physician, shall prescribe for any skin disease. Floors and woodwork must be mopped and furniture dusted every day.

MARKET FRUITS STILL PLENTIFUL

WITH EXCEPTION OF LETTUCE
AND SOME OTHER PRODUCTS.

THE PEACH CROP PLENTIFUL

Canning Season Opens Up the Middle of This Month—Quotations from Market.

Luscious fruit on the local market is as abundant as the leaves on the trees. Following are a few quotations from the business circles.

Radishes—Four bunches for ten cents.

Onions—Four bunches for ten cents.

Sweet corn—10 to 15 cents per dozen.

Watermelons—10 to 25 cents a piece.

Bananas—10 and 20 cents per dozen.

Peaches—25 and 40 cents per basket.

Cabbage—5 cents per head.

Cailliflower—10 and 15 cents.

Peppers—10 and 15 cents per dozen.

Plums—25 cents per basket.

Grapes—25 and 30 cents per basket.

Tomatoes—3 and 10 cents per basket.

Potatoes—60 cents per bushel.

Flour—(best grade) $1.25 per sack.

Cucumbers—15 cents per dozen.

Squash—Three for 10 cents.

Wax beans and string beans—20 cents per peck.

Spinach—20 cents per peck.

Musk melons—40 cents per basket.

Among the home grown products that are growing noticeably scarce is lettuce. The demand is considerably low also and the only source of supply at this time is from the few local growers.

Earlier in the season much of this product is shipped in. While the demand for sweet corn is fairly steady, people are becoming tired of it and less has been sold this week.

There is much sweet corn grown by the local men that is still in the field and there will be a plentiful supply for the remainder of the season, so the local retailers say.

Celery earlier in the summer is shipped from Michigan in large quantities but the small amount that is now sold and at hand comes from Rock county growers.

A few of the home grown watermelons are now on the market but it will be some time before they are as large as the southern grown fruit.

The prices will go down somewhat if the local crop shows up well later on. Few local apples have come in yet but the crop in Rock county is very fair this year and it is expected that apples will be good later in the month.

The farmers state that the trees are well laden and the fruit will be fine and providing a hailstorm or heavy rains do not interfere, there will be plenty of fruit for every fireside this winter.

About the middle of this month is the official season for the canning of peaches and according to the reports there will be enough for all and sold at a price within the reach of every household buyer.

Home grown potatoes are plentiful and can be purchased for 50 cents per bushel. Taking all in all, those fruits so popular during the summer months have been bountiful this year and if the apples and coal this winter are equally as plentiful and reasonable in price, the people of Janesville will have little room to complain.

MISS MACLEAN WINS VALENTINE MEDAL

Forfeited by Miss Fifield—Finals in Other Matches Postponed.

Miss Belle MacLean yesterday won the Valentine gold medal for the ensuing year, her opponent in the finals, Miss Catherine Fifield, having forfeited the prize to her.

Both of the club's trophies, the MacLean family trophy holds both of the club's trophies, as the Richardson medal was won by Miss MacLean's father, C. C. MacLean.

In the Benedicts' match for the J. P. Baker steln, eight players handed in qualifying scores and in the single men's match for the Albert Albert Schaller cup only six players qualified.

Not much enthusiasm was shown. The first round of match play was to have come off yesterday afternoon but no matches were played as but a few of each class appeared at the links. It is thought that the contests will be held open for another week in order to allow of more qualifying scores to be made.

This will make the matches of greater interest.

A large number of guests gathered at the clubhouse for supper last evening and after the serving of the repast, the balance of the evening was spent in dancing. Roy Carter presided at the piano.

STOUGHTON'S NEW ENCAMPMENT

WILL BE INSTITUTED THIS EVENING—FIRST IN TOWN.

NUMBER MAY GO FROM HERE

Special Train Could Not Be Arranged—Will Return in the Morning.

Odd Fellows, numbering from twenty-five to fifty will leave early this evening for Stoughton where the order will institute an encampment with appropriate exercises at the lodge hall in that town during the evening.

Many May Go from Here The encampment is the next higher order among the Odd Fellows above the subordinate lodge and this is the first of that branch to be instituted at Stoughton.

The order above the encampment is the canton. While the disagreeable weather and inconvenient train time for returning may decrease the number who will go from here it is thought that at least twenty-five members will be present as representatives of the Bower City.

Go from Other Towns Members will attend from Milwaukee, Edgerton, Milton, Baraboo, Whitewater, and other towns in Wisconsin so that the occasion will afford a chance for the different lodges in some of Wisconsin's towns to be come acquainted. There will probably be altogether from 100 to 150 Odd Fellows present and an enjoyable social time is expected.

No Special Train As there is no regular train returning from Stoughton late in the evening and the next train to Janesville not leaving Stoughton until about seven in the morning, efforts were made to have arrangements made for a special train, to return at the conclusion of the ceremonies. Owing to a difference in rates this could not be conveniently accomplished and this fact may deter many from attending who would otherwise be glad to take part.

FITZ-HUGH LEE'S FIRST HOT FIGHT

March 17, 1863

(Copyright, 1903, by G. L. Kilmer.)

On the morning of March 17, 1863, Fitz-Hugh Lee's bugler sounded "boots and saddles" in the bivouac on the Rappahannock as the first call for that famous fighting brigade to a pitched encounter. Although it was the second year of the war, there had been no real fighting on horseback in the east up to that date, except between mere handfuls of men in outpost skirmish. Jeb Stuart had often ridden on daring raids in 1862, but never yet crossed sabers with a foe worthy of his steel.

The armies of Robert E. Lee and Joe Hooker lay on opposite banks of the Rappahannock, Hooker getting his tanks in trim to cross over and pass the flank of Lee on the way to Richmond. But the river was patrolled on the southern bank by Stuart's alert horsemen. These must be cleared away before Hooker's advance set face southward or the movement would be discovered at the start. Fitz Lee's main camp was at Culpeper Court House, some miles back from the river. His strongest guard stood watch at Kelly's ford, the best crossing of the region above Fredericksburg.

Hooker ordered General William W. Averell to ride out with his brigade of 5,000 troopers and smash Fitz Lee's brigade. But they had clever scouts in the camps of the Army of Northern Virginia. Averell had barely left his tents on the north bank when General Robert E. Lee sent a telegram from headquarters at Fredericksburg to his nephew, putting him on his guard, and by nightfall of the 16th Fitz Lee's own scouts brought word that the riders in blue were only six miles from Kelly's ford and aiming for that crossing.

Fitz-Hugh Lee kept twenty sharpshooters at the ford regularly and immediately sent down forty more at a gallop. The sharpshooters had built pits for cover and lay awake all night to meet the enemy. The ford was obstructed with fallen trees and the opposite approach barricaded with a network of stout limbs and saplings heaved to a sharp point. Averell's advance guard twice tried the ford about 8 a. m. on the 17th and was driven back. Finally Averell picked twenty men from his brigade and, calling upon Lieuten-some time, the Federals holding on by the aid of artillery.

In the charge of the Virginians Stuart lost his gallant boy artillery. Colonel John Pelham. Pelham's guns were not in the fight, but he had chanced to hear of the affair and rode to the field with the head of column along with his chief, who also was there by accident. When the Virginians charged on the farmhouse, Pelham rushed to the front, waving his sword and urging on the troopers with a wild battle shout. He was struck dead by a shell from Averell's guns, and the fiery cavalry swept on over his body.

After its repulse at the farmhouse the Third Virginia was joined by Colonel T. L. Rosser's Fifth Virginia, but in a second effort both were driven back by the rapid carbine fire of the Pennsylvania and Averell's guns. Meanwhile Fitz-Hugh Lee's right had charged Averell's left and ridden almost up to the battery. This charge was also repulsed, the Federal troopers making a gallant countercharge.

Finding his force outnumbered three to one, Fitz-Hugh Lee decided to meet the foe on ground of his own choosing. He drew back and formed his line at the edge of an open field 600 yards wide. Four cannon crowned a knoll which overlooked the roadway. Averell's column followed the retreating Confederates rapidly and marching through a wood suddenly came upon Lee's battery and troopers in their new position. The wide field on the Federal side was covered with dry stubble, which was on fire. Fitz-Hugh Lee's guns raked the roadway, but in the face of it all the Federal troopers rushed on, beating out the flames with their overcoats and blankets as they advanced.

On looking the ground over Averell decided not to push the attack. From appearances which were deceiving he thought that the Confederate battery was behind earthworks and the ground was such that he could not carry it by flank attack. His artillery ammunition was imperfect, while that of Fitz-Hugh Lee was terribly deadly. Whenever the Confederate gunners made a target of a flying troop of Federals they invariably landed a shot.

Seeing that Averell would not take the initiative, Fitz-Hugh Lee ordered a grand cavalry charge. It was a rash venture and one he would not have undertaken after the blue and gray had crossed sabers a few times, as they did frequently thereafter in 1863. He put every squadron in, leaving no reserve and having nothing for his troopers to rally on in case of defeat except the four guns of his battery. Averell's battery had 150 rounds of serviceable ammunition held in reserve in anticipation of a charge. When Lee's troopers rode forward, the battery opened with shell at 1,500 yards, changing to spherical case at 1,000 yards and to double shot at 400 yards.

Lee's Fourth Virginia regiment encountered a rail fence when half way across the field, and the troopers tore it down under a galling fire from the Federal carbines. This regiment, with the Second Virginia, constituted Lee's right wing. Together they aimed for Averell's battery. Meanwhile Lee's left wing came to a deep run, which checked the line, and it was forced to change from line formation to a column of fours under fire, die across the stream and then deploy into line of battle. Averell's cavalry met this charge by firing at long range from the woods screening that flank. The Confederates tried to sweep around and reach the Federal guns which lay directly in front of the Fourth and Second Virginia. Between this column and the battery were two strong fences including the main road of the region. By the time the troopers reached the road they were broken up into small squads and the impact of the charge lost. The regiments, three in number—the First, Third and Fifth Virginia—turned back and made their way to the hill from which they started.

On the other flank the desperate charge of the Second and Fourth Virginia met with stubborn resistance to the last. After passing the fence these troopers dashed for Averell's guns. The gunners left their pieces, but opportunely the First Rhode Island cavalry rushed to the point of danger and in a sharp hand to hand fight drove off the Virginians. The defeat of the Second and Fourth Virginia was not a rout, however. They rode back to the old ground to reform without molestation. Even the gallant Rhode Islanders, who made the hardest fight in Averell's column, were satisfied to have rescued the battery.

With the retreat of the Second and Fourth regiments came Averell's chance to destroy Fitz Lee's brigade. Lee's men had been beaten in fair fighting. They were fewer in number than the enemy by almost three to one and had suffered most in the fighting. But Averell excused himself from further attack on the ground that he had heard the drum beat of infantry in the Confederate lines the night before, that Fitz Lee's position was protected by rifle pits and the guns protected by earthworks. He could not attack by the flank and believed that a direct attack would end in disaster. In fact, he thought that withdrawal in the face of the enemy would be extremely hazardous. Hence he gave it up and marched back across the Rappahannock.

Fitz Lee lost 100 men and 150 horses killed or wounded, double the battle casualties sustained by his opponent. GEORGE L. KILMER.

A WAR MESSAGE

(Original.)

During the civil war Jane St. Clair, a young girl of nineteen, was put in charge of a telegraph office in one of the stations on the Louisville and Nashville railroad in Kentucky. The people of that state were divided in their sympathies between the Confederate and Union sides, most of them being Confederates. Jenny St. Clair, however, belonged to a staunch Union family and was herself a Unionist.

Those were times when raids were made by the Confederates behind the Union armies for the purpose of harassing their enemy's communications. Jenny's post was far in the rear of the Union advance, but she knew that at any time the town was liable to be captured and the first place the raiders always took possession of was the telegraph office. Jenny used to wonder what she should do if they swooped down upon her office, and her thoughts finally resulted in a plan of action in such an event.

One night a cavalry force commanded by the famous Confederate partisan leader, General John Morgan, came riding into town and half a dozen men under an officer went straight for the telegraph office on the second floor of a small frame building. Dismounting, they hurried upstairs and threw open the door, with drawn revolvers ready to cover the operator; but there was no operator there. A kerosene lamp was burning on the table to which the telegraph instrument was fixed. There were several chairs, a looking glass hanging to the wall and a lounge. These were every article in the room except a woman's hat.

"Reckon this office is run by a gal," said one of the men. "She heard us coming and lit out."

"Reckon," replied the officer. He went to the telegraph table and, sitting down, began to click the key. He called a neighboring town and received a signal which he knew came from a Confederate who had captured the replying station.

"Tell the general," came the words, "that we have just taken this place and are ready to move in conjunction with him against the M. railroad bridge and trestlework. We will attack the bridge guard at the north end at 5 o'clock in the morning and expect General Morgan to do the same on the south end."

The officer called one of his men and gave him the message to take to General Morgan. Then he sprawled himself on the lounge, falling into a doze.

There is a half awake, half asleep condition that we have all experienced in which one hears a sound, not knowing whether he really hears it or not. The officer thought he heard a clicking. Telegraph keys are continually clattering, and the key on the table was no exception. But it did not appear to the dozer that the sound was on the table. It was rather down on the floor and at times directly beneath him. Presently he got himself awake and started up to listen. All was perfectly silent. Lying down, he was soon in the same semiconscious condition as before—he dared not go to sleep while on duty—and now the clicking recommenced in a more pronounced manner, and it seemed to be in the head of the lounge on which he rested. He began to take note of the letters and read the message he had just received. It was very singular, he thought, that it could be clicking in his pillow. Was he not dreaming? Or was he really receiving the message? Or was its sender repeating it to make sure of accuracy?

Presently the messenger returned with a dispatch which stated that all was right and General Morgan would be on hand. This was sent over the wire. Then the officer unscrewed the instrument and, taking it with him, rode away with his men.

The next morning, when the two detachments of Confederate cavalry made a joint attack on the bridge and trestle, as agreed, they found an overwhelming force drawn up at both ends to oppose them. They proceeded with the attack, only to draw off with a number of killed and wounded and the loss of some prisoners. Among the latter was the officer who had received the telegraph message for General Morgan the night before. The captured officers were taken to the Union general's headquarters.

"Which of you did the telegraphing last night from here?" asked the general.

"I," said one of them. "Well, you needn't take the trouble to use any of our telegraph stations again. Our operators are too smart for you."

"How so, general?" "Orderly, ask Miss St. Clair to step in here."

Jenny St. Clair came in, looking radiant. "Tell the gentleman how you outwitted him," said the general.

"The lounge you were lying on," said Jenny, "you may remember, was not open underneath. It was hollow and there was a lid to it. Thinking I might some time receive a call from you, I had fixed an instrument inside the lounge, and when I heard you chatter up to the office, got in and closed the lid over me. I heard the message you received and transmitted it to the general here. What I feared was that you would hear the click of my instrument."

"I did," said the officer, opening his eyes, "but being tired with hard riding I was drowsy and thought it was a repetition."

Jenny received a large reward from the government she had so well served, and married a colonel in the Union army. HENRY J. WHITEFORD.

Man's Presence Among Club Women Satisfactorily Explained.

Soon after her marriage Lillian Bell was invited to be the guest of honor at a big reception given by the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs, and her husband, with extraordinary devotion, also went, to be swamped in the mass of womankind. When the affair was about half over, Mr. Bogue came across another man, who said sympathetically:

"Is your wife a club woman? Mine is, and that's why I am here."

Mr. Bogue replied that his wife did not belong to the club, and the stranger went on:

"Is that the row of bonnetes up there?"

Mr. Bogue said it was.

"Which is the Royal Bengal?"

"The one standing next to the president."

At the close of the conversation the stranger said: "I'm only a club husband, but if your wife isn't a club woman, how do you come to be here?" "Oh," said Mr. Bogue, "I'm the husband of the Royal Bengal."—New York Daily News.

Hen Hatched Out Snakes.

Orrin Clark, a farmer who lives on the West Hill road, says a Chittenden, Vt., dispatch, has a Plymouth Rock hen which has hatched out a nest of snake's eggs instead of a flock of chicks. The most remarkable part of it is that the hen found the eggs herself, and Mr. Clark knew nothing of her family affairs until she brought the brood to the farm one day early in the week.

The Virginians swept down the stone fence, using pistols in the faces of the Federals. Finding no gap through the wall, they rode back into a field, reformed their ranks and returned to the attack through a farmyard held by the Federals. The Federals at the farm were Pennsylvanians, and the fighting waged fiercely for
